

A FUNERAL CEMETERY.

The Serious Charges Made Against the Trustees of the Evergreens in Brooklyn.

Considerable excitement and indignation have existed for some time past among the owners of lots in the Evergreens Cemetery, in consequence of alleged outrages on the part of the trustees, consisting in dereliction and neglect of the grounds. The affair was brought up yesterday, on a motion of ex-Judge Daly, before Judge Nelson, to enjoin the present trustees from exercising further power over the cemetery. The trustees, consisting of Andrew G. Burgess and others, lot owners, and Sylvester M. Beard, Wm. A. Cummings, Robert French, Dennis Barnes, Joseph O'Donnell, and Wm. R. Grace. The lot owners affirm that the present Board of Trustees were self-constituted, and can have no legal control over the cemetery or its management.

The present trustees assumed control of the cemetery and sold lots without regard to the general law of 1847 and amendatory acts and rights which have accrued to the purchasers of plots, and the owners therefore pray that the defendants be enjoined from exercising any further control over the cemetery, and that a receiver be appointed by the court to take the custody of the property, with power to manage and sell the same. The trustees deny all of the proceedings, under the direction of the court. The lot owners make affidavits that the grounds have been allowed to run wild, that the shade trees in the private burial plots and that cows, horses and cattle have been allowed to range over the greater part. Ex-Judge Daly, another of the lot owners, says the trees which would take six years to grow were cut down in their lots and sold by the trustees, who, they believe, received $100 for them. He also affirms that originally limbs of the trees were left, and the paths were torn up and left in a disordered condition. One of the lot owners states that he drove twenty cows out of the cemetery.

The trustees asserted that the lot owner pulled down his trees, and let the ground run wild himself, and they say they did not eat down any trees except those which were cut down.

The grounds were originally purchased for $6,000 by Mr. Beard, and, as alleged, he sold $2,000 to himself, and the balance he loaned to the trustees, who gave him $2,000 worth. The cemetery is now worth about $60,000. The damage alleged to have been done is set out in the papers.

Judge Nelson took the papers.
